Dear Mr. Chairman:

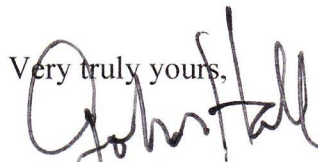

As owner of Hall Trucking, I require good cell phone communications in order to operate my business. That type of service is not available in many rural parts of Kentucky. Though I have written in the past to express my support of LightSquared, I write today during the Reply Period to make comments on some of the opinions expressed by others, and to continue to urge the FCC to allow LightSquared to develop its system.

VoX Communications, a provider of wireless services in New York and Florida, echoed the comments of many when it said, "Hundreds of millions of American consumers would benefit from the competition, coverage and innovations that would be made possible by LightSquared's network. We are aware of several ways in which American consumers will benefit from products that we plan to offer, and we can only begin to imagine the benefits that consumers will derive from the innovations developed by our competitors."

Some of those millions live in rural Kentucky, a region, as I pointed out in my last letter, that is notoriously underserved for cellular service.

I strongly urge the FCC to approve LightSquared's pending application for a license modification.

Very truly yours,

John Hall, President
Hall Trucking Company
